

English lesson of a kind- Exquisite encounter with Black Wings players

A classroom full of enthusiastic young people looking forward to meeting some of the most renowned ice hockey players of the Black Wings Linz in joyful anticipation - this atmosphere was omnipresent on Thursday, November 14, when the students of the 7th form, accompanied by several 5th formers, were given the opportunity to meet North American hockey players and at the same time get an impression of what being a professional sportsman is like. Needless to say, this get-together did not only constitute an extraordinary chance to improve our fluency and proficiency in spoken English. Talking to the players in person provided an exquisite insight into the routine of professional sportsmen. Intrigued, we eagerly indulged in this specific English lesson, however, the time passed all too quickly due to the amical atmosphere. To say it quite bluntly, having stayed in school voluntarily after our regular classes has undoubtedly paid off!

Thank you, Mrs Habringer, for your unabated dedication and willingness to pass on your passion for the English language (and ice hockey). Events like these reinforce our motivation and help us in the language acquisition process!
